Global Soccer Simulator is a small software application that helps with simulating a large number of soccer seasons. The comfort of working with portable tools Gaining access to the program's GUI requires only opening the executable file (there's no installation setup included in the process). You may store it on USB flash drives or other portable media devices, carry it with you, and run it without administrative privileges. No entries are left in your Windows registry so you can uninstall the utility by simply deleting the package that you have downloaded from the Internet. This is a Java-based tool so you need to previously deploy the working environment on your computer. Clean looks You are welcomed by a simple GUI that embeds only a few configuration settings. There's no support for a help manual but the dedicated parameters are intuitive so you are not going to invest a lot of time and effort into tweaking them. Soccer simulator Global Soccer Simulator employs a wizard-like assistant for helping you carry out soccer simulations. This approach comes in handy especially for less experienced users, as they are offered step-by-step guidance throughout the entire configuration process. The program gives you the possibility to select a single league or multiple ones. What's more, you are allowed to specify the number of seasons that you want to run, select the season that you want to view, as well as choose the preferred league (premier or first division). Based on the aforementioned configuration parameters, Global Soccer Simulator is able to reveal a table with the soccer results for each league. Plus, you can also get the matchday results. Bottom line All things considered, Global Soccer Simulator delivers a handy suite of options and an intuitive environment for helping you simulate various soccer seasons. Visit our shop Subscribe us on Youtube : Determining if an object is a Point3D? Is there a way to determine if an object is a Point3D? My issue arises in that I am trying to check if a Point3D is a Point3D and pass the object to a thread. i.e: if (a) { Point3D temp; Thread thr = new Thread(() => func(temp)); thr.Start(); } This doesn't work as I get the error: "System.Collections.Generic.List`1[Foo].this[int] cannot be indexed with the subscript operator." I can get around this by setting temp as an X Y and Z but I wanted to see if I could know the type of the object instead of casting it. I've been researching this issue for the last half hour and can't find anything to help me out. A: You can use the IsGenericType method to determine if it is a type that you are able to treat as a Point3D. if (a is Point3D) {... } Or using is: if (a is Point3D) {... } Edit: Since you say that you are having trouble doing this because the object is of a type that you are not able to treat as a Point3D, there is a special case for this: if (typeof(Point3D) == a.GetType()) {... } But you have to use the syntax typeof to be able to use it:
