While there is little to no information about Oracle's new chipset, it will likely be a part of the next-gen ARM-based (Aptiv) SoC. A slide [PDF] provided by the chipmaker showed a very easy on-chip memory controller that can support up to 2TB of RAM on chip using the ECC memory controllers. These memories are also compatible with the SD-Card interface, assuming that there is some way to implement memory expansion like the previous generation. On-chip memory will likely have multi-channel support for speed memory like LPDDR2. This new technology is expected to become the new standard for mobile and embedded devices. The next-gen chipsets could be integrated with the new SATA and USB3.0 implementations and possibly with the DP8730x or DP8812x displays This indicates that the next-gen mobile SoC would likely use DDR3 memory. ASUS and some other companies have already released some DDR3 kits for mobile chipsets. And this chipset could also be used in tablets and notebooks.1.

Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an internal combustion engine having an arrangement for cooling the cylinder head by means of a coolant flowing through the cylinder head. The cylinder head comprises combustion chambers and intake and exhaust ports. A coolant conduit is arranged to permit a coolant to flow through the cylinder head at least in a region of the combustion chambers.

2. Description of the Prior Art A cylinder head for an internal combustion engine of the initially defined type is disclosed in the 3e33713323
