... I stood on the bank of the river and watched the ice floes go by. The river was wide and full-flowing, with many small islands. Somewhere out there, on the other side of the river, lay a village. I didn't see her, but I knew that there was a house where I would live. I felt warm and calm. I knew that my family, my beloved woman, was waiting for me there. I was sure that not one, that there were three of us. And now we are all together. I looked at the floating ice floes and smiled. I was happy. Just one thought that haunted me
