Hyperlink OCX Crack + [Win/Mac]

HyperLink.OCX is an ActiveX control which displays and changes the colour of a static text link. It mimics the functionality of Internet Explorer's internal hyperlink feature, allowing you to provide links to documents and resources from within your application. HyperLink.OCX attaches itself to the static text you specify and displays an appropriate icon to the mouse. For developers: HyperLink.OCX is a standalone COM object allowing you to add linked text to any application's forms. It can be used to add links to forms, dialog boxes and other windows. HyperLink.OCX allows you to specify a link URL and the linked application to open. You can set the colour of the linked text at any time. This feature allows you to provide links in the same way as Internet Explorer's pointing finger when the user hovers over the link. HyperLink.OCX can either appear as a static icon in the foreground, or attach itself to a static text and change the colour when the mouse moves over the link. In the Visual Basic language, you can use HyperLink.OCX like this: Dim hlink As New HyperLink.OCX hlink.Text = "Click here to read the document." hlink.NavigateURL = "" hlink.On Hover = "Change the colour of the link." DoCmd.OpenLink "HyperLink.OCX". "" DoEvents End Sub Other uses for the HyperLink.OCX can include providing links from web pages to documents, opening a blank email message for the user to reply, or opening documents from within your application. The "mailto:..." URL scheme is automatically supported. The control's URLs can be relative, absolute or relative to your documents folder. The VB source code allows you to customize how the linked text changes the colour when the mouse moves over it. The default settings work for many common web browsers, although they may look odd if you use a different browser. (There is a password protected documentation file containing VB source code examples). In addition, HyperLink.OCX comes with a simple prototype JavaScript library - demonstrating a few of the simple examples that the control can provide. HyperLink.OCX Features: HyperLink.OCX

Create hyperlinks within your application using this easy to use ActiveX control. Simply add your text to display and URL to point to, and that's it! HyperLink.OCX displays the traditional IE 'pointing finger' icon when the mouse hovers over it. You can navigate to any type of file or document. The appropriate application is automatically launched for you. Add a mailto: link, and use an email address of your own. The control can be configured to change colour once a link has been visited, and styled to suit your application's look. The download includes VB code samples demonstrating how to use the control. Social Share It's always a pleasure to receive a free piece of software, and this was no exception. Great Social Sharing Formula is a free toolkit that gives you everything you need to make a great social share button (including the one that comes with Internet Explorer). This includes shapes, buttons, charts, photos, video and even a Share button that spreads to an appropriate app. You'll be able to build a button that suits your branding and looks great in your own style; then you can either easily change the URL on the fly, or choose from a list of links. You can use your own system icons, to go with your website's branding, and can even create a toolbar button for Google Chrome. Finally, you can create a bar chart that changes dynamically with the page - just select the chart type, name it and start adding your data. Social Share Formula's Share button also has an Ajax-based tracking system built in. This records all the details on the page, including images and scripts that are used. It also records the data shared and how users got there. These records are stored in the database and can be viewed any time you need a list of users who shared your page. Well worth a try.
