You are warmly welcome to use the material at your own discretion. Please read more How breast cancer was first recognised For a long time, women with breast cancer had one of the worst survival rates in the UK. It wasn't until the early 1900s that women began to be treated effectively. Medical advances included the recognition of breast cancer and the development of treatments for it. In 1902, breast cancer was described and surgeons began to use the radical mastectomy (removal of the breast and some of the surrounding lymph nodes). It was also known for a long time that the quality of life for women affected by breast cancer was poor. By the end of the 1900s, the survival rate for breast cancer in the UK was around 10%. 1cdb36666d
