The River in Athens, IL ActiveIn the late 1950s, Auburn Electric Company and the Illinois Power Company constructed a hydroelectric power plant along the Illinois River. Construction began along the Illinois in 1961 and did not finish until 1965. The River is home to 31 species of native fish. The 52-foot drop of the Illinois River between the spillway and mouth has allowed these fish species to thrive, which is rare in a hydroelectric dam. The River is also host to the River People and the Native Americans. There are 16 miles of trails along the River, free and open to the public. The River is also known for its scenic beauty and it's wild nature. Home to a vast array of birds, animal life and wildflowers. One of the most unique areas along the river is the Huckleberry Shelter. It was built by hand and is a replica of a cabin built by the Menominee, a Native American tribe. Huckleberry Shelter Kettle Moraine State Forest is located just north of the River. The forest was once home to the Menominee, who lived in Wisconsin and around the Great Lakes. However, a century of logging, expanding suburban sprawl, and large scale agriculture created so much environmental degradation that by 1990 only 20% of the original forest remained. The Forest was restored to some of its original look and felt by the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC). CCC workers, many of whom were unemployed during the Great Depression, were brought in to work with the Forest. The CCC workers built a network of trails, built roads, planted trees, and made many other improvements. Kettle Moraine State Forest Frank Lloyd Wright was drawn to the Forest in the early 20th Century. He was fascinated with the, century-old trees and said he was attracted to it because of its "strange, raw beauty". He wanted to build a house along the River and challenged Daniel Burnham and Frank O. Havemeyer, both designers from Chicago, to create something similar to a tree house. It was at the top of a steep bluff, above the main branch of the Illinois River. Wright wrote: "The only firm thing in the air is the brilliant green river beneath us. The transparent, open sky and space-void of course are for Wright like nothing but a pure state of being, timeless, universal in effect. The sense of being so far from the world is an unmit

Q: How to understand this 'or' statement in Swift I'm curious about the line in the following code: `var total: Int!` I tried to translate it to English, and I arrived at "total", which is of the type Any. But, I think the statement means 'total' is either of the type Int or it's not Int. Does 'Any' mean both? A: It means that total is Any. This is required for generics. You can't do this without using Any. There is no difference between it and Int for the actual value of total. `could not pay rent.` "It's important we note the fact that the decision to move in the first place was not his," said Olivier De Schutter,

They have been forced to move out.” “More than 65 percent of Palestinian human rights defenders have been subject to harassment or intimidation,” said De Schutter. “For these people, the most difficult thing is to move to another place.” There is a special need for protection when a human rights defender is forced to move outside of their country. “It is in this specific situation where protection becomes more important,” said De Schutter. “There is a special need for protection when a human rights defender is forced to move outside of their country,” he said.
