Thursday, June 9, 2010 Riley Goes to Autism Camp Riley is having a camp filled with his favorite things. Fishing, fireworks, swimming, bouncing and loud laughter. I love how calm he is with all these new experiences, especially his friends and other kids who have autism. I look forward to several days of fun, laughter and simple moments. We leave tomorrow morning and then I will be home for 9 days. I am so proud of Riley and all that he does for others.

Association of human immunodeficiency virus type 1 (HIV-1) and severe malarial disease in adults. Acute HIV infection (AHI) is associated with a hyperinflammatory state that may be accompanied by systemic inflammation, organ dysfunction, and severe sepsis/septic shock. In the present study, we assessed the impact of malaria in hyperinflammatory and neurogenic AHI. Cohort study with 2 cross-sectional comparative analyses. A single hospital in Pune, India. Consecutive patients with AHI presenting to a tertiary care hospital. Plasma samples from AHI patients (n = 30) and an age- and sex-matched control group (n = 30) were analyzed for markers of inflammation and endothelial activation. HIV-1 serology and CD4 T-cell count of AHI patients and age- and sex-matched control subjects were performed. Malaria was evaluated by thick blood smears. The AHI cohort had increased plasma levels of Interleukin-6 (IL-6), Interleukin-8 (IL-8), Interleukin-17 (IL-17), soluble vascular cell adhesion molecule-1 (sVCAM-1), soluble intercellular cell adhesion molecule-1 (sICAM-1), as well as Tumor necrosis factor (TNF)- $\alpha$  compared with controls. Malaria was highly prevalent in both groups (n = 13/30 in AHI and n = 8/30 in controls, P = .002). Severe malarial disease (SMMD) was associated with more severe infection in AHI. Plasma levels of IL-6 (mean, 116.5 pg/mL), IL-8 (mean, 249.2 pg/mL), and IL-17 (mean, 151.3 pg/mL) were higher in AHI with SMMD compared with the control or AHI patients without SMMD. IL-17 levels were the highest in severe

The differential expression of three latent membrane protein-encoding genes in the central nervous system of mice. The three murine homologues of the latent membrane protein (LMP)-1-3 have been shown to belong to the immunoglobulin superfamily. The encoded LMPs are expressed in several types of cells, are associated with the transmembrane lipid raft microdomains in the plasma membrane, and are associated with cell proliferation. Three isoforms of the LMP genes have been found in mice and rats, and the expression of these genes has been characterized in the brain, spleen, thymus, liver, and kidney. Our present study focused on the expression of the LMP genes in the central nervous system of mice. The results of reverse transcription-polymerase chain reaction (RT-PCR) analysis demonstrated that LMP-2 and LMP-3, but not LMP-1, were abundantly expressed in the adult brain. Furthermore, RT-PCR revealed that LMP-2 was expressed in relatively high levels in the adult brain, in contrast with the relatively high expression of LMP-1. LMP-3 was expressed at very low levels in the adult brain. Western blot analysis revealed that the expression of LMP-2, but not LMP-1, was high in the adult brain. However, RT-PCR analysis demonstrated that LMP-1 was expressed in very high levels in the adult brain. These results suggested that the abundant expression of LMP-2 in the adult brain might be involved in the brain-specific functions of LMP-2 in adult mice. 990 So.2d 595 (2008) STATE of Florida, Appellant, v.
