Photoshop comes with a number of features that come with a price tag of a few thousand dollars. However, many of these features are available via the free Photoshop Elements, Adobe Photoshop programs. Even though Photoshop is one of the most powerful and well-known imaging programs, it's in a class by itself. Photoshop has two editions: Adobe Photoshop for Windows and Photoshop for Mac OS X. Each edition features a different set of tools, which means that the software can be difficult to learn and use if you don't know what version you're using. After purchasing Photoshop, you must register your copy. The registration allows you to use the program for a certain number of years. To find out whether you need to register your Photoshop copy, just type 'Adobe Photoshop' into the online version of the product page for your edition, and you'll find a list of the required registration number. Creating an image using Photoshop Adobe Photoshop is a good tool for creating images from scratch. You can import an image and make changes to that image by using the various tools available in Photoshop. In this section, I show you how to import an image, adjust its brightness and contrast, crop the image, and use Photoshop's selection tools to paint a new color over an existing one. Importing a photo Let's start by importing a picture that you have stored on your computer. You can import an image that you have scanned or photographed by using the photograph you want to use as the basis for creating your image. When you import the image, Photoshop imports the entire file, giving you the option of bringing only a single image (an image from the '.tif' format, for example) into the program. This approach is different from that of importing a collection of digital images, as you see in the next section. (Keep in mind that you can always edit the imported image even if you import the entire file into Photoshop.) You can also import a PDF image file; however, a PDF image file is seldom a good starting point for creating a digital photograph. If you want to create an image from a PDF file, save the image as a file type that does not use the Adobe PDF file format. To import an image, you can either choose to import an entire image or just a single image. If you choose to import the entire image, you can also choose to import the image as a Photoshop '.psd' file, which makes Photoshop the

The purpose of this study was to determine the relationship between hip distorsion and femoral anteversion in patients with pelvic circumferential acetabular deformity (CAD). Cross-sectional, retrospective study; Level of evidence, 3. We reviewed computed tomography (CT) scans of the pelvis and hips in 135 female patients with pelvic CAD and a minimum of 2 years of follow-up. We determined the acetabular component position (alpha angle) and measured the alpha angle (positively oriented offset of center of femoral head from acetabulum), hip distorsion angle, and femoral anteversion angle. The relation between the alpha angle and hip distorsion angle, hip distorsion angle and femoral anteversion angle, and alpha angle and femoral anteversion angle was then determined. Hip distorsion angle and the minimum femoral anteversion angle were 3° and 7°, respectively. The mean value of hip distorsion angle was significantly different from that of alpha angle (P NOTE: This order is nonprecedential United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit

Christina Karas, and Leah Chase Detroit Free Press The Michigan Department of Treasury is gearing up to begin accepting applications for a $1,000-per-person tax credit for businesses that create jobs, Gov. Rick Snyder's office said Friday. The Governor's Office of Jobs and Economic Growth posted the news on the state's website. "We're now in the process of drawing up the rules and regulations on that," said spokeswoman Anna Heaton. "I don't know when we'll be able to start taking applications for the tax credits." The governor's fiscal agency hasn't yet determined whether the program will be a mass tax credit or credits targeted to specific industries or businesses, she said. The credits are an on-going state tax credit program, Heaton said. The state said that tax credits will be on top of the credits available to businesses under the Michigan Business Tax Credit. Under the law, businesses are eligible for a maximum tax credit of $25,000, and they can get a credit for each full-time equivalent worker, Heaton said. Businesses must be certified to receive the tax credit. They must have been certified for six quarters. The news comes three weeks after Snyder launched a $15 billion jobs and infrastructure plan in the city's East Side neighborhood, at a special event at Detroit's Little Caesars Arena. In that plan, Snyder proposed $300 million in tax credits to be split between Detroit and Michigan for training programs. He also promised to issue $250 million in "investor-ready" bonds for public-private partnerships on infrastructure projects. The governor also said that the plan would expand on a $2.8 billion investment in roads and bridges. Contact Christina Hall: chall@freepress.com or 313-223-4129.
