Human serum albumin binds to the chromaffin granule H/K-ATPase. Our previous studies had demonstrated that human serum albumin (HSA) significantly inhibits the activity of the chromaffin granule H/K-ATPase (ATP-hydrolysing, H⁺-pumping) complex. To gain further insight into the physiological relevance of HSA binding to the H/K-ATPase, we have investigated the interaction of HSA with the chromaffin granule H/K-ATPase. The two purified chromaffin granule membranes (CS I-II-enriched and CS III-enriched) exhibited identical (active, strong) bovine serum albumin (BSA) binding, whereas they showed different labelling by (125)I-labelled HSA. Pre-incubation of intact chromaffin granules with BSA decreased (125)I-labelled HSA binding, but not (125)I-labelled BSA
