What's new in Dead Bits:

Volume 1: 2019 The Big Blimp, aka, a group of friends who frequent summer jam sessions, usually several times a year, in various locations in the Northwest. This website will feature the latest jams (ideally also available to stream online)from these sessions. --- If you enjoy the jam and would like to contribute, please contact me via the (I'm new here!)contact link. Note, the first jam to appear here will likely be Longview, WA on the 8th of July, 2019. This is also where the music will be streamed from thanks to one of the members. Note, all jams are comprised of music made up of sections of songs (track segmentation). That is, you can hear the beginning, middle and ending of a song. Most jams are an hour long, but most sessions have a break in the middle (often a few minutes of tense silence as the members puzzle over their guitars). Most of the music on this site (and on the website) is either my own original work or has been borrowed and reworked. I do my best to credit the original creators, but there are those that I don't know and will always be. Thank you so much for keeping me plugged in music-wise! Enjoy the site and see you at the next jam! Check back in a couple of weeks when the site will have more non-jam music. --- Friday, May 17 Longview, WA / Anthem Sound Kitchen

The endocrinology of vestibular function. This review is designed to summarize the current knowledge of the endocrinology of the vestibular system. Most of the detailed literature reviews and critical analysis of the issues covered in this chapter have been published previously. In most cases reference has been made to these reports. We summarize the endocrinological aspects of the vestibular system in general and briefly review a number of the more important endocrine disorders of which they are a feature. This is followed by a section on the secondary hypothalamo-hypophyseal hormones. Finally, we discuss the neuroendocrine involvement in the development of the vestibular system and the role of hypophyseal hormones in vestibular dysfunction. We conclude that it is becoming increasingly clear that the hypothalamo-hypophyseal hormones are major regulators of all aspects of vestibular function.
