The PITS Viewer After processing is complete, the PITS Viewer is used to optimize the image before it is printed. This is done by clicking on Preview Output in the main menu. The difference in the image quality after use of the PITS Viewer is obvious. Currently there are 5 software options to enhance the image. Diversification: Here in the first software option the image is modified using an adaptive image solution. The software looks at the edges of the print image and evaluates which area has sharpened edges. These sharpened edges are then taken from the next print. This process continues until the edges of all the images are made sharp. To begin you simply select the diversification software and then the magazine you wish to view. Choose the number of pages you wish to preview. If you wish to review all the pages choose to review all. Click on Accept or Cancel on the Output Settings menu. The previewing process may take a short while, depending on the amount of images and the images used on the publication. You can click on the Continue button to begin another preview. Click Save to save the publication. Booklet: In this process the software first evaluates what is inside the sections of the publication. This is done by making a check mark next to the items that are set to show on the front cover, spine and back cover. The next step is to evaluate the images. To begin you select the software from the Software menu and then the publication you wish to view. Then click on the Preview button. The software will make a comparison between the images. If you find that the book does not have enough images in some area, you can evaluate the images available and select to add more. Once you have completed this process you can save the publication. Click on the Continue button to begin another preview. Click Save to save the publication. Mini Pagination: Here you have the option of splitting the publication into sections and then evaluating each area. To begin just select the software from the Software menu and then the publication you wish to preview. Now click on the Preview button. The software will make a comparison between each part of the print and evaluate what is needed to each part. Here you can select what is needed to the front cover, the spine, the back cover and the title page. The sections of the publication can be split further into Pages.

cells can't make and have to get from the food you eat. More specifically, lysine is a part of a nonessential amino acid called "methionine." It's one of the six amino acids that your body can't produce on its own. But it's important for your cells to make and form proteins, which are a part of the structure of your cells, tissues, and organs. It's possible for you to get a sufficient amount of lysine by eating a varied diet. However, if your diet doesn't provide enough lysine, it may not be enough to meet the nutritional needs of your body. Lysine is also a part of the B-vitamin group called "essential amino acids." The other essential amino acids are isoleucine, leucine, valine, and threonine. Just like lysine, you need them for your cells to make protein. Important Facts about Lysine Lysine can also be known as "L-lysine." The B in B-vitamins stands for "Biotin" Lysine is found in virtually every living thing on the planet. It's possible to get enough lysine from a varied diet, but if you need more, taking a lysine supplement may be a good idea. Lysine and Methionine The B in B-vitamins stands for "Biotin." The two most common types of B-vitamins are Thiamine (B1), Riboflavin (B2), Niacin (B3), and Biotin (B6). Biotin is a water-soluble B-vitamin that most commonly known as Vitamin B6. Your body can make Biotin, but you can also get it from your diet. Your brain, heart, and bones need Biotin, as well as your cells. Methionine is a part of a nonessential amino acid called "lysine." Lysine is a part of the B
