Smart Shapes in Visio include shapes that are based on real-world shapes—for example, the letter “E” or a houseTres Amigos March 7, 2006 There are some things in life you just can't avoid, and there are some you shouldn't. This is one of those unavoidable things, especially for the young. The big bad world has a way of coming up on you, usually when you're not looking. And just like a river can catch a steelhead on the fly or snare him by the tail in the current, the bad world can catch the youngster playing hooky. If you're lucky, as I was, you can catch it when it's still nothing but the on-screen image and the sound. If not, it might not be too late to learn from the mistake. This is the classic third-act-cowboy-killing-the-horse technique of movies. There's a reason. Bad guys make mistakes. Just because they look ominous doesn't mean they're always sinister. They can make mistakes and they can almost always make mistakes

Janeen.O'Reilly@qtruc Chair of the Townsville City Council, John Ware, yesterday announced a review of the council's decision not to hold an inquiry into the proposed Northern Land Council. The council had committed to conducting a review of the decision when the appeal was heard by the High Court in December, but the court found it had not been granted the opportunity to do so. "The importance of having a process to determine the contested legal status of the proposed Northern Land Council is essential," Mr Ware said. "What took place in December was a significant injustice against the rights of 10,000 residents of the proposed NLC, particularly many elders and families from the area. "I did not make the decision to commence the review in the interests of the community, and I am not prepared to continue such a review if it is the case that the community will not support it." Mr Ware said the legal processes were still ongoing, with an appeal to the High Court from Noel Pearson to be heard in October. Mr Ware said the council would agree in principle to conduct the inquiry if it believed it was the best way to support the council and its residents. "This is a mistake,"
